The University of Missouri Department of Family and Community Medicine - Columbia, Missouri (USA)

The University of Missouri Department of Family and Community Medicine is recruiting faculty members to contribute to the mission of improving the health of Missourians while creating exemplary care environments for effective teaching of medical students and resident physicians.

The department is thriving and has been ranked as one of the Top 10 in the country for more than 25 years. Family Medicine physicians and residents staff 10 community-based clinics, with five in rural areas, serving 65,000 patients in more than 160,000 annual patient visits. Their research educational pipeline is robust and focused on developing the next generation of primary care researchers.

The department has highly motivated, collaborative, and intelligent faculty members with diverse interests and advanced skills in a variety of investigative designs and analyses applicable to family medicine research. They want to expand their research enterprise and are searching for candidates to fill three new positions.
